COMMUNITY INFRASTRUCTURE LEVY (CIL)

Preliminary Draft Charging Schedule

The Council has published the first stage of work toward adopting CIL, which is now available for public comment. The Preliminary Draft Charging Schedule sets out the CIL rates that the Council intends to introduce. This is informed by viability evidence. You can find out more information about the consultation document and supporting evidence at www.brentwood.gov.uk/CIL.

CIL effectively replaces much of the existing process of planning obligations known as ‘Section 106’ agreements. CIL monies are pooled into one fund, there is no time constraint for the spending of monies collected and it can be used on any infrastructure needed to support new development across the Borough.

How can I comment?

Consultation on the CIL Preliminary Draft Charging Schedule begins on Thursday 27 October, running for six weeks until Thursday 8 December 2016. To view the consultation document, comment online, and read through supporting evidence please visit our website at www.brentwood.gov.uk/CIL.

What is CIL?

CIL was introduced by the Planning Act 2008 and defined in the CIL Regulations 2010 (as amended). It is a locally set charge on new development that local authorities can choose to introduce. It is based on the size and type of development and once set is mandatory to pay and non-negotiable. The funds raised must be used to provide new infrastructure and improve existing infrastructure required to support new development across the area.

What happens next?

Regulations require two stages of consultation before the Draft Charging Schedule can be submitted to government, followed by an examination in public. The Preliminary Draft Charging Schedule represents the first stage, the second stage is called the Draft Charging Schedule. Subject to successful examination the Council would then be able to adopt CIL.
